Babies and Toddlers

Ages birth thru 4

Babies and toddlers need preventive health services often. They need to get their shots on time and to be checked for their growth and developmental milestones.

At age 12 months and 24 months, it is very important to have your baby/toddler tested for lead levels in their blood. Be sure to ask your health care provider about this special lab test.

How often?

Under 1 month	12 months
2 months	15 months

School Aged Children

Ages 5 thru 12

State law requires children entering kindergarten or first grade and all new students entering the state to be up-to-date on immunizations.

If a Healthy Kids preventive health screening finds a medical problem which could prevent your child from doing well in school, your child may be eligible for extra services through the "Healthy Kids" benefit.
